Abstracts

The Global Business Jet market continuing to face & brave a challenging, complex & uncertain global macroeconomic environment marked by disparate economic conditions across traditional & emerging markets, significant downturn in the global energy sector impacting oil driven economies significantly and economic weakness as well as difficult conditions prevailing across key emerging market economies with all the factors collectively impacting the global demand for business jets which traditionally has a strong correlation with global economic cycles. The industry OEMs continue to face significant competitive intensity in a difficult market scenario and are engaged in a virtual pitched battle over pricing in an oversupply driven market scenario with additional pressures from pre-owned aircraft inventory. However, utilization of business jet platforms for potential ISR & EMS applications, like for the USAF's upcoming JSTARS program, may provide ancillary growth avenues to the industry.
