Abstracts

The 2022 edition of this Annual Strategy Dossier report analyses the overall strategy focus and provides insights into the Strategies & Plans being conceptualized & pursued by GE Aviation for the near to medium term horizon with Commercial Aviation recovering steadily from COVID-19 pandemic, led by the narrow body aircraft market, which has been doing fairly well while the wide body aircraft market continues to be in dire straits with international travel yet to make a comeback. On the defense side of things, the realignment of U.S. defense spending which is now pivoted towards competing with near peer adversaries and maintaining its traditional overmatch over adversaries has accelerated the pace of replacement & modernization of ageing defense equipment with the award of several new defense contract awards over the recent years and many more coming up along with focus on rapid development of game changer technologies. The U.S. defense budget has registered one of its biggest increases for the year 2022 and has reached the $768 billion level providing significant growth opportunities to the industry going forward.

The Global Aerospace & Defense industry has been on a roll as of-late with defense spending on a clear upswing amid a rapid evolution of traditional world order owing to radical geopolitical changes. Russian resurgence and rapid Chinese military ascension have effectively led to a return to great power competition spearheaded by innovative & next generation technologies. The Russian invasion of Ukraine has sent a shock wave across the entire Eastern Europe, which along with the looming Chinese threat over the Asia-Pacific region, is likely to further spike up defense spending across these regions and most other parts of the globe over near term. GE Aviation is gearing up for the entry into service of the Boeing 777X, slated for 2023, powered by the world's largest commercial turbofan engine, the GE 9X, and has been actively eyeing the upcoming, strategic JMR-FVL program, having won the U.S. Army's ITEP and the USAF's F-15EX Eagle II programs earlier. GE has also been leading the development of propulsion systems for the upcoming supersonic business and commercial airliners being developed by a couple of start-ups.
