Abstracts

The global defense & aerospace industry at present is juxtaposed between strong tailwinds driving tremendous growth momentum in the commercial aerospace segment and continued headwinds in the defense segment, witnessing a cyclical downswing marked by defense budgetary cuts underway across most traditional markets after experiencing a phase of strong growth driven by the allied war on terror during the first decade of the present century. The global aerospace & defense industry & most industry players are, thus, in the process of harnessing the alternate cyclicity of the commercial & defense segments effectively to partially offset the ongoing slump in the defense segment by leveraging the commercial segment's growth momentum while preserving the core competencies & capabilities of their defense businesses through maintenance of an optimized defense industrial base, in line with the prevailing industry vicissitudes and to navigate their way through.

The Commercial Aerospace segment is in the middle of a significant growth phase, driven, primarily, by significant growth in air traffic, projected to grow at 5% CAGR over long-term and continued improvements in cargo traffic globally along with other strong, long-term growth drivers complemented perfectly by the introduction of new aircraft programs by almost all key industry OEMs featuring cutting-edge technologies, especially, propulsion systems along with a range of other incremental as well as radical innovations by key players in the global industry value chain which has been a key driver of major fleet renewals underway across airlines globally and has ultimately been transpiring into significant growth avenues marked by burgeoning & record order backlog positions for new, commercial aircraft programs across all key industry OEMs.

The embattled Defense segment, however, too, has some niche windows of growth opportunities available, created, mostly by technological evolutions & radical innovations being pursued & delivered by the industry value chain driving the generational leap in strategic as well as operational capabilities while providing significant incentive through optimized operating economics for the impending need for replacement of legacy, cold war era systems & hardware, as evinced by the recent state of developments over the JMR-FVL (Joint Multi-Role, Future Vertical Lift), JLTV (Joint Light Tactical Vehicles) & the Next Generation, Strategic Bomber programs respectively and the emergence of the recent, self-funded developmental programs by OEMs.

Most industry OEMs are in the process of realigning their portfolio with focus on strengthening commercial businesses to match emerging industry dynamics by leveraging their strong cash positions while simultaneously optimizing their overall industrial footprint & cost base by leveraging operating, financial, resource & market synergies across their defense & commercial businesses effectively. Additionally, growing international exports as well as market presence & upgrading existing defense programs to target international customers aimed at keeping the production lines operational; being done, most noticeably, by Boeing over its F-18 Advanced Super Hornet & F-15 Silent Eagle programs; are amongst other key strategies being pursued by industry players.

Against this backdrop, the report takes a macro view of the global defense & aerospace industry, analyzes the strategic positioning of the World's 15 leading industry players with respect to the current & emerging industry dynamics through a comprehensive SWOT framework analysis and provides key, comprehensive insights into the key strategies & plans being conceptualized, developed & implemented by industry OEMs for the medium term horizon.
