The beta glucan market is experiencing significant growth as awareness of its diverse health benefits increases. Beta glucans are naturally occurring polysaccharides found in the cell walls of certain fungi, bacteria, yeasts, and grains, such as oats and barley. These bioactive compounds have gained recognition for their ability to stimulate the immune system, promote gut health, and potentially support overall well-being. Driven by a growing focus on preventative healthcare, functional foods and beverages, and the increasing demand for natural health solutions, the beta glucan market has witnessed remarkable expansion. In 2024, the market saw increased interest in beta glucans for applications in the food & beverage, nutraceutical, and pharmaceutical industries.
