Abstracts

The global Black Bean Extract Market size is valued at USD 1164 million in 2024 and is projected to reach USD 1948.2 million by 2032, registering a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.65% over the forecast period.

The black bean extract market is witnessing stable growth driven by its nutritional benefits, antioxidant properties, and applications in nutraceuticals and functional foods. Black bean extracts are rich in anthocyanins, proteins, and dietary fibre used in supplements for metabolic health, weight management, and cardiovascular support. Manufacturers are focusing on high-purity anthocyanin extracts, protein concentrate powders, and water-soluble forms for beverages. Growth is supported by rising demand for plant-based protein supplements, expanding functional beverage formulations, and research supporting black bean extracts for blood sugar regulation and heart health. Challenges include taste masking requirements in beverages, raw material supply variability, and regulatory approval for health claims in certain markets. Recent developments include Xi'an Lyphar launching anthocyanin-standardised black bean extracts, Shaanxi Jiahe introducing black bean protein powders for supplements, and Martin Bauer enhancing water-soluble black bean extracts for functional foods.

Major trends include development of anthocyanin-standardised black bean extracts and protein concentrates for supplements and functional foods.

Drivers are rising demand for plant-based protein and antioxidant supplements, expanding use in functional beverages, and research supporting metabolic and cardiovascular benefits.

Challenges include flavour masking needs in beverage applications, raw material supply variability, and regulatory restrictions on therapeutic health claims.

Companies focus on enhancing anthocyanin extraction purity, developing water-soluble powdered forms, and creating protein-rich extracts for nutrition applications.

Recent developments include Xi'an Lyphar launching anthocyanin extracts, Shaanxi Jiahe introducing protein powders, and Martin Bauer enhancing soluble black bean extracts.
