Abstracts

Carbon tetrachloride, a colorless, non-flammable liquid, has historically been a versatile industrial chemical with applications in various sectors. Its uses include refrigerant production, degreasing, and as a solvent in diverse manufacturing processes. However, its toxicity and potential for ozone depletion have led to its widespread phasing out under international agreements like the Montreal Protocol. The market is now witnessing a shift towards more sustainable alternatives while addressing the remaining legitimate uses of CCl<sub>4</sub>.

Market Overview

2024 has seen a continued decline in the overall carbon tetrachloride market due to stricter regulations and the availability of safer alternatives in many applications. However, the market continues to exist, primarily serving niche applications where substitutes haven't yet proven feasible or cost-effective. This includes areas like the production of specific pharmaceuticals, certain industrial processes, and as a feedstock for some specialized chemical productions. Looking ahead to 2025, the market is expected to remain relatively stable, with limited growth driven by specific niche applications where CCl<sub>4</sub> remains essential.
