Abstracts

The global Chickweed Extract Market size is valued at USD 168.8 million in 2024 and is projected to reach USD 234.6 million by 2032, registering a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.2% over the forecast period.

The chickweed extract market is witnessing niche growth driven by its traditional use in European and North American herbal medicine for anti-inflammatory, skin-soothing, and diuretic properties. Chickweed (Stellaria media) extracts contain flavonoids, saponins, and vitamin C used in herbal supplements, skincare products, and topical ointments for eczema and irritation relief. Manufacturers are focusing on water-based extraction methods, high-purity powdered forms for supplements, and integration in natural skincare formulations. Growth is supported by rising demand for herbal skincare ingredients, increasing interest in traditional detox and diuretic herbs, and expansion of botanical extract portfolios by nutraceutical companies. Challenges include raw material supply variability due to seasonal wild harvesting, limited clinical validation for therapeutic claims, and formulation compatibility in cosmetics. Recent developments include Xi'an Lyphar launching flavonoid-rich chickweed extracts, Shaanxi Jiahe introducing water-soluble chickweed powders for supplements, and Bio-Botanica enhancing chickweed glycerite extracts for skincare applications.

Major trends include development of flavonoid-standardised chickweed extracts for skincare, detox, and diuretic supplement applications.

Drivers are rising demand for herbal skincare ingredients, traditional detox and diuretic uses, and integration into botanical extract portfolios.

Challenges include seasonal raw material availability, limited clinical validation for medicinal claims, and formulation compatibility in emulsions and creams.

Companies focus on enhancing extraction purity, developing water-soluble powdered forms, and producing glycerite extracts for natural skincare formulations.

Recent developments include Xi'an Lyphar launching flavonoid-rich extracts, Shaanxi Jiahe introducing soluble powders, and Bio-Botanica enhancing chickweed glycerite skincare extracts.
