Abstracts

The global duplex stainless steel market is experiencing robust growth, driven by its unique combination of high strength, excellent corrosion resistance, and remarkable cost-effectiveness. Duplex stainless steel, a versatile metal alloy comprising a mixture of austenite and ferrite phases, offers superior mechanical properties compared to traditional austenitic stainless steels, making it ideal for a wide range of applications, particularly in the construction, oil & gas, and chemical processing industries. In 2024, the market witnessed a surge in demand for duplex stainless steel, fueled by the increasing focus on sustainable construction, the growing use of this material in energy infrastructure projects, and the need for corrosion-resistant solutions in demanding environments.

Looking ahead to 2025, the duplex stainless steel market is expected to maintain its positive growth trajectory. The expanding global infrastructure, particularly in developing economies, coupled with the growing demand for durable and corrosion-resistant materials in industries such as shipbuilding, desalination, and chemical processing, will be key drivers. Furthermore, the increasing adoption of duplex stainless steel in high-performance applications, such as automotive components and aerospace components, will contribute to market growth. However, the industry must address challenges related to the fluctuating price of nickel, a key component of duplex stainless steel, and the need for advancements in production technologies to improve cost-competitiveness.
