Abstracts

The global Epoxy Resin Release Agent Market size is valued at USD 1326 million in 2024 and is projected to reach USD 2323 million by 2032, registering a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.26% over the forecast period.

Epoxy resin release agent market is growing steadily as composite manufacturing, moulding, and epoxy casting industries utilise release agents to prevent adhesion between mould surfaces and cured epoxy parts. These agents ensure clean demoulding, protect mould surfaces, and improve product finish quality. Key manufacturers focus on semi-permanent, solvent-based, and water-based formulations compatible with epoxy, polyurethane, and polyester resins. Growth is driven by rising composite production in automotive, aerospace, and wind energy sectors. However, challenges include VOC emission regulations and compatibility issues with certain mould materials. Recent developments include Chem-Trend launching a water-based semi-permanent epoxy release agent with improved slip performance and reduced environmental impact for wind blade and automotive composite manufacturers.

Major trends include increasing use of semi-permanent, water-based epoxy release agents for composite moulding to ensure clean demoulding, high surface quality, and reduced cycle times.

Growth is driven by expanding composite manufacturing in automotive lightweighting, aerospace structures, and wind turbine blade production requiring reliable mould release solutions.

Key challenges include VOC emission restrictions affecting solvent-based agents, compatibility considerations with high-temperature moulds, and potential transfer issues affecting paint adhesion post-release.

Companies are innovating with low-VOC, high-efficiency water-based formulations offering strong slip properties and reduced environmental footprint to meet sustainability goals.

Recent developments include Chem-Trend launching water-based semi-permanent epoxy release agents with enhanced slip performance and environmental compliance for wind energy and automotive composite applications.
