Abstracts

Europe oil and gas supply demand outlook report from OG Analysis provides detailed outlook of regional and country wise forecasts to 2025. Signs of industrial activity revival and recovery of power sector gas demand are offering strong opportunities for gas suppliers to Europe. On the other hand, delays in France nuclear program, volatile coal prices and IMO norms on ship emissions are set to drive the demand for natural gas in the region.

On the oil front, the region is expected to witness decline in oil demand in short term future despite increases during 2015 and early 2016. With plans to increase natural gas role in energy mix and increasing shift towards floating LNG terminals, oil consumption will continue to decline.

Further, the report also focuses on planned capital expenditures of leading 10 global companies to provide insights into the future of global oil and gas market investments and new areas of development.
