Abstracts

The global Lion's Mane Extract Market size is valued at USD 390.4 million in 2024 and is projected to reach USD 1026.2 million by 2032, registering a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 12.84% over the forecast period.

The Lion's Mane extract market is witnessing strong growth driven by rising interest in cognitive health, nerve regeneration, and nootropic supplements. Lion's Mane mushroom (Herichium erinaceus) extracts contain erinacines and hericenones that stimulate nerve growth factor (NGF) synthesis, offering neuroprotective and cognitive enhancement benefits. Manufacturers are focusing on dual extraction (water and ethanol) for full-spectrum actives, high beta-glucan standardisation for immune support, and encapsulated formulations for nootropic supplements. Growth is supported by increasing consumer focus on brain health and memory, expanding functional mushroom markets, and integration into cognitive beverages and powdered blends. Challenges include raw material supply variability, extraction complexities to isolate active compounds, and regulatory scrutiny over cognitive health claims. Recent developments include Nammex launching dual-extracted Lion's Mane powders with high beta-glucans, Host Defense introducing erinacine-standardised cognitive supplements, and Real Mushrooms enhancing water-soluble Lion's Mane extracts for beverages.

Major trends include development of dual-extracted Lion's Mane extracts with erinacine and hericenone standardisation for cognitive and nerve health.

Drivers are rising demand for cognitive enhancement and nootropic supplements, growth of functional mushroom markets, and research supporting neuroprotective benefits.

Challenges include raw material supply variability, extraction complexity for active compound isolation, and regulatory approvals for brain health claims.

Companies focus on enhancing erinacine extraction purity, dual extraction for full-spectrum actives, and developing water-soluble powders for beverage and capsule formulations.

Recent developments include Nammex launching dual-extracted powders, Host Defense introducing erinacine-standardised supplements, and Real Mushrooms enhancing soluble Lion's Mane extracts.
