Abstracts

The global Szechwan Lovage Extract Market size is valued at USD 141.4 million in 2024 and is projected to reach USD 295 million by 2032, registering a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 9.63% over the forecast period.

The Szechwan lovage extract market is witnessing stable growth driven by its traditional use in Chinese medicine for improving blood circulation, relieving headaches, and gynecological health support. Szechwan lovage (Ligusticum chuanxiong) extracts contain ligustilide and ferulic acid used in herbal formulations for menstrual disorders and cardiovascular benefits. Manufacturers are focusing on standardised ligustilide extracts, water-soluble powdered forms for capsules, and integration into traditional Kampo and Chinese herbal products. Growth is supported by rising demand for women's health supplements, cardiovascular health product launches, and research supporting anti-inflammatory properties. Challenges include raw material supply variability due to regional cultivation, limited awareness outside Asia, and stringent regulatory approvals for health claims. Recent developments include Xi'an Lyphar launching ligustilide-standardised lovage extracts, Shaanxi Jiahe introducing water-soluble lovage powders, and Tsumura enhancing Kampo formulations for women's health with Szechwan lovage extracts.

Major trends include development of ligustilide-standardised Szechwan lovage extracts for cardiovascular and gynecological health supplements.

Drivers are increasing demand for women's health herbal products, traditional use in blood circulation and menstrual regulation, and research supporting anti-inflammatory effects.

Challenges include regional raw material supply limitations, limited global consumer awareness, and strict regulatory approvals for health claims.

Companies focus on enhancing ligustilide purity, developing water-soluble powdered forms, and integrating extracts into Kampo and traditional Chinese formulations.

Recent developments include Xi'an Lyphar launching standardised extracts, Shaanxi Jiahe introducing soluble powders, and Tsumura enhancing Kampo women's health formulations.
