Abstracts

Pharmaceutical contract manufacturers intend to provide different services to their vendors including manufacturing of the product, R&D and non-clinical services such as supply chain management. The China pharmaceutical contract manufacturing market has been growing significantly as the major firms are expanding its manufacturing capacity in China. For instance, in November 2016, Merck & Co., Inc. invested more than $236 million to expand manufacturing of pharma business in China. The company has invested $160.5 million in 2016 at its Nantong plant to manufacture high-quality pharmaceutical products as per China's essential drug list. Likewise, Boehringer Ingelheim International GmbH has also expanded pharma manufacturing facility in May 2017. This has resulted due to the cost-effective production and availability of skilled labor in the country.

The major factors that are contributing to the growth of China pharmaceutical contract manufacturing market includes the shift of global pharmaceutical firms for outsourcing in China and the increasing burden of non-communicable diseases, such as CVD (Cardiovascular disease) and Cancer. According to the American Cancer Society, in 2015, China witnessed around 4.3 million new cancer incidences and over 2.8 million cancer fatalities. Similarly, the prevalence of CVD is rising in the country. Such an increasing prevalence of CVD and cancer in China is encouraging contract pharma companies to develop new drugs in the country. For instance, in November 2015, WuXi AppTec Group and Eli Lilly & Co. signed a partnership agreement for the development, manufacturing, and commercialization of cardiovascular drug in China. The drug is intended to treat patients with dyslipidemia.

Moreover, it also aimed to reduce cardiovascular events in patients with increased triglycerides and low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol. According to Wuxi

Phamatech, this strategic collaboration support china's reforms to accelerate development and production in China of extremely innovative new drugs that target foremost unmet medical needs. It shows the efforts of China contract manufacturers towards drug development, which in turn is expected to boost the China pharmaceutical contract manufacturing market. In addition, the growing trend of China pharma exports to the US pharma industry and increasing demand for biosimilars is also encouraging the market growth. However, issues over quality control and stringent government regulations are creating hindrance in the growth of China pharmaceutical contract manufacturing market. Additionally, increasing advances in drug discovery & development and MAH (Marketing Authorization Holder) pilot program are expected to offer significant opportunity for the market growth.

Additionally, China pharmaceutical contract manufacturing market is segmented on the basis of manufacturing process type, product type, route of administration and services. According to the manufacturing process type, the market has been segmented into sterile manufacturing and non-sterile manufacturing. Based on the product, the market is segmented into over-the-counter (OTC) drugs, active pharmaceutical ingredients, finished dosage formulations and others. Based on the route of administration, the market is segmented into oral administration, inhaled administration, parenteral administration, and others. Furthermore, based on service, the market is segmented into manufacturing, non-clinical service, and R&D.

Some of the major pharmaceutical contract manufacturers in China includes STA Pharmaceutical Co., Ltd., Bayer AG, Pfizer Inc., Boehringer Ingelheim International GmbH and Catalent Pharma Solutions, Inc. These companies are adopting various strategies including mergers & acquisitions, partnerships, and geographical expansion to remain in the competition. In June 2016, Pfizer intends to invest approximately $350 million for the development of biotechnology center in China. This will enable the company to increase footprint in the biotechnology sector.
