Abstracts

Tumor ablation is the technology used for destroying the tumor which can be done by using imaging technology to place the needle into the tumor organ. The treatment can be done by using various technologies such as radiofrequency ablation, microwave ablation, cryoablation, and other such technologies. There are various cancers that can be treated by this technology such as lung cancer, liver tumor, prostate cancer, kidney tumor, and other tumors. The increasing incidence of cancer and the rising aging population is the major growth factors for this market. Moreover, high efficacy and safety are majorly contributing to the growth.

The government and healthcare authorities are very much concern for using radio and microtechnology due to the side effects associated with it. Hence, it can hinder the growth of the tumor ablation market. However, the research and development in ablation technology for treating the primary breast cancer and adrenal neoplasm, as well as the improvement in imaging technology will fuel the growth of the market in future. Furthermore, the adoption of minimally invasive therapy will increase the usage of this technology and create a huge opportunity for this market.

Geographically market is divided into North America, Europe, Asia Pacific and Rest of the World. The developed healthcare infrastructure and increasing healthcare expenditure make the North American region, a dominating market. In addition, the prevalence of cancer in the US further fuel the growth of the market as advanced ablation technologies is needed for destroying the cancerous cells. Asia Pacific is expected to have the highest CAGR in this market due to the improvement in the healthcare industry and the government support for adopting such technology.

There are many companies which are operating in tumor ablation market such as HealthTronics, Inc, Cortex Technology, Cooper Surgical Inc, AtriCure, Inc., Galil Medical Inc., Endocare, Inc., and Integra LifeSciences Holdings Corporation. The companies are working on the development of innovative technologies. In addition, these players have adopted inorganic growth strategies to remain competitive in the market. For an instance: Galil Medical has signed an agreement in October 2017, for the acquisition of Perseon Corporation.
