Abstracts

The United Arab Emirates (UAE) telecoms market is a duopoly, with incumbent Emirates Telecommunication Corporation (Etisalat) and Dubai-based Emirates Integrated Telecommunication (EITC) offering a full suite of fixed, mobile, and data services.

The regulator, the Telecommunications Regulatory Authority (TRA), has issued several regulations such as carrier pre-selection, carrier selection, local loop unbundling, and mobile number portability to encourage competition in the telecoms market. However, there have been ongoing delays in the implementation of many of these regulations at Etisalat's end and the lack of clarity in final implementation timelines could make for a challenging competitive landscape for other service providers.
