In US, the Alzheimer's disease is the 6th leading cause of death overall and among those aged 65 and above, it is the 5th leading cause of death. While the deaths from major diseases, like heart disease have decreased, the death due to Alzheimer's have increased by more than 60% between 2000 and 2012. The total number of patients having Alzheimer's disease was 5.4 million in 2012. Out of this, the people aged 65 and above accounted for 5.2 million and at least 200,000 patients were younger than 65 with early onset of Alzheimer's. It has been observed that almost 1 in 8 people coming under the 65+ age group are patients of Alzheimer's disease. Amongst the population in the 80+ age group, almost 45% have been detected with Alzheimer's disease.

There exists strong competition in the Alzheimer's disease market in the US. Due to this, the market is open to new and savvy companies. Given that there is a continuous rise in the ageing population and an expected exponential increase in Alzheimer's disease cases, these new entrants have the opportunity to capture a major share in the market through their efficient therapies and drugs. Thus, a better understanding of the underlying biology by the new entrants would lead to many new branches of treatment in different stages of clinical testing.
