Abstracts

The Cobalt naphthenate (CAS #61789-51-3) market delineates a specialized niche within the specialty chemicals and industrial catalysts sector, where this organometallic salt—formed by the coordination of cobalt(II) ions with naphthenic acid ligands—serves as a potent drier and promoter, harnessing its redox-active cobalt center to accelerate autoxidation in unsaturated fatty acid systems, thereby expediting the curing of alkyd resins and polyester varnishes essential for high-performance coatings, inks, and rubber vulcanization in demanding environments. This viscous, reddish to purple liquid or semi-solid, characterized by its 6–12% cobalt content (typically 8% in standard grades) and solubility in hydrocarbon solvents (viscosity 50–200 cP at 25°C), operates via catalytic hydroperoxide decomposition at ambient temperatures (0.01–0.1% loading) to generate alkoxy radicals that propagate film formation with through-dry times
