Abstracts

Foodservice disposables refer to various disposable products made from plastic, paper, aluminum, or other materials that are used in the foodservice industry. These products are designed for one-time use, after which they should be disposed of.

Shifting trend towards consumption of ready to eat food is fueling the growth of the market. Adoption of food service disposables is increasing on account of rising online delivery services through mobile apps and other online platforms, which cater the market with a variety of food at our fingertips.

Since the COVID-19 virus outbreak in December 2019, the disease has spread to almost 100 countries around the globe with the World Health Organization declaring it a public health emergency. The global impacts of the coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) are already starting to be felt, and will significantly affect the Food Service Disposables market in 2020.

COVID-19 can affect the global economy in three main ways: by directly affecting production and demand, by creating supply chain and market disruption, and by its financial impact on firms and financial markets.

The outbreak of COVID-19 has brought effects on many aspects, like flight cancellations; travel bans and quarantines; restaurants closed; all indoor events restricted; over forty countries state of emergency declared; massive slowing of the supply chain; stock market volatility; falling business confidence, growing panic among the population, and uncertainty about future.

This report also analyses the impact of Coronavirus COVID-19 on the Food Service Disposables industry.
