Xanthan gum is a polysaccharide secreted by the bacterium Xanthomonas campestris, used as a food additive and rheology modifier, commonly used as a food thickening agent (in salad dressings, for example) and a stabilizer (in cosmetic products, for example, to prevent ingredients from separating). It is composed of pentasaccharide repeat units, comprising glucose, mannose, and glucuronic acid in the molar ratio 2.0:2.0:1.0. It is produced by the fermentation of glucose, sucrose, or lactose. After a fermentation period, the polysaccharide is precipitated from a growth medium with isopropyl alcohol, dried, and ground into a fine powder. Later, it is added to a liquid medium to form the gum.

Corn starch is the main raw materials. Most manufacture companies need to purchase materials from the large-sized raw materials manufacturers. Xanthan gum is often applied in food & beverage, oilfield, pharmaceutical & cosmetics industry and others. Food & beverage is the main application, which occupied 52.69% share in 2015.
