Abstracts

Copper Tube is a pipe made of copper as the main material, which has the characteristics of high strength, good ductility and long life. Copper Tube is an important industrial material. Due to its excellent electrical conductivity, thermal conductivity and corrosion resistance, it is widely used in many fields such as construction, electrical, chemical, and automobile. Copper Tube plays an important role in building piping systems, such as water pipes and gas pipes. In addition, copper tubes are also often used to manufacture refrigeration components of air conditioners and refrigeration equipment, such as condensers.

The global copper tube production areas are mainly concentrated in China, the United States, Europe, Japan and South Korea. According to CRI analysis, these regions are becoming the main production areas of copper tubes in the world with their rich resources and advanced production technology. China dominates the global market with its scale and cost advantages. China's copper tube production accounts for about 60% of the world's total production, making it the world's largest copper tube producer. The United States, Europe and Japan have advantages in high-end products and technological innovation.

According to CRI analysis, the global copper tube market has huge growth potential and broad development prospects. The recovery of the global economy has accelerated infrastructure construction, especially in developing countries, where the accelerated urbanization process and the continuous improvement of infrastructure have significantly increased the demand for copper tubes. In addition, the rapid construction of new energy and smart grids has greatly promoted the demand for copper tubes. Copper tubes play an irreplaceable role in power transmission and distribution. With the continuous expansion of the new energy field, the demand for copper tubes is also increasing.

According to CRI analysis, in recent years, India has vigorously promoted the development of infrastructure construction, real estate construction, electric vehicle manufacturing and other industries, which has led to the continuous growth of the Indian copper tube market.

The output of copper tubes in India is also rising, but the overall production capacity still cannot meet the rapidly growing domestic demand. The Indian copper tube market is highly dependent on imports, especially products imported from Vietnam, Malaysia and China. According to CRI data, the import value of copper tubes in India in 2024 is close to US$1.224 billion, a year-on-year increase of 56.5%.

According to CRI analysis, the main import sources of copper tubes in India include China, Malaysia, Vietnam, Thailand, the United States, Japan and South Korea. Among them, Vietnam has become the largest import source of copper tubes in India due to factors such as geographical proximity, accounting for about 60% of the entire import market.

The top three countries for the main import sources of copper tubes in India from 2021 to 2024 are Vietnam, Malaysia and China. According to CRI analysis, the main companies exporting copper tubes to India are traders and copper tube manufacturers. The main importers of copper tubes in India from 2021 to 2024 include home appliance manufacturers, trading companies, etc.

As India's economy continues to expand, the demand for copper tubes in the construction, automobile, power and other industries will continue to grow, promoting the growth of the Indian copper tube market. According to CRI analysis, due to the limited production of copper tubes in India, the import volume of copper tubes in India is expected to continue to grow in the next few years. CRI recommends that global copper tube production and trading companies should conduct research on the Indian market as soon as possible to prepare for the layout of the Indian market.
