Abstracts

Description

Risperidone is a new antipsychotic drug mainly used to treat both positive and negative symptoms of schizophrenia. It has antagonistic fast actions at 5-HT receptor when given at low doses and at dopamine D2 receptor when given at high doses. And it takes only one hour for risperidone to reach its peak. And it has a long half-life of 3 hours. The metabolite of risperidone is 9-hydroxyrisperidone which has pharmacological activity and a half-life of 24 hours. And risperidone mainly undergoes renal excretion.

As risperidone exerts little and reversible influence on electrocardiogram, it is of little toxicity to heart in treating schizophrenia. Risperidone is not only effective in ameliorating psychological symptoms of dementia but also advantageous in improving illusion, behavior disorder, aggressive behavior and cognitive function with little adverse effects. Therefore it is worthy of further application.

China now faces a series of complex and urgent medical demand. With lifestyle changes and pressure brought about by economic development, the number of people suffering from mental disorder goes up to over 100 million in China, which boosts the demand for antipsychotic. Meanwhile, with ageing population, dementia patients grow in number, increasing the demand for drugs that can ameliorate psychological symptoms.

According to CRI's market survey, the annual sales of risperidone increased from CNY 38 million in 2005 to CNY 103 million in 2014. And Xian Janssen Pharmaceutical Ltd. had the largest market share of about 48% for sales value in 2014.

The market size of risperidone is expected to keep growing in the next few years in
