Abstracts

Description

Gastric ulcer is a common disease worldwide. It is estimated that there are 25 million to 70 million gastric ulcer patients in China.

As early as the 1980s, the global market size of gastric ulcer drugs exceeded USD 8 billion. In 1988, Swedish company Astra (now known as AstraZeneca) developed a new anti-ulcer drug — proton pump inhibitor Omeprazole (trade name: Losec). Omeprazole, able to inhibit gastric acid secretion and relieve gastralgia, gastrectasia and other symptoms in a short period of time, became popular among ulcer patients immediately after it was marketed. At the end of the 20th century, the annual sales value of Omeprazole once hit a record high of USD 6.26 billion.

Chinese pharmaceutical companies began to imitate Omeprazole API in 1992, after which a large number of generic drugs were put on the market. With the launch of generic Omeprazole in China, Chinese pharmaceutical companies keep scrambling for market share from AstraZeneca. Overall, the market size of Omeprazole in China is growing, with the sales value exceeding CNY 1.3 billion in 2017. Although there are many anti-ulcer drugs on the market, because of good effects, Omeprazole stands out from its many competitors and secures its leading role. As the lifestyle changes, the number of patients with gastric ulcer continues to rise in China. In the next few years, Omeprazole will still have certain growth potential in China.
