Executive Summary

The global business jets demand which was nearly halved during the financial crisis has now improved and large players are launching new models in the wake of increasing demand from Middle East, Asia and North America. The global business jets market was worth USD 20.9 billion in 2013 and is projected to grow at a CAGR of 6.86% to USD 33.8 billion by the end of 2020.

The demand in China is driven by corporations and the rising number of billionaires, who aspire for the convenience offered by business jets. The business jet fleet in China grew at an average annual rate of 27%, which almost matched the 26% annual growth in number of Chinese citizens categorized as wealthy during the period 2007-2012. However, recently the market has hit a rough patch due to slow growth of the Chinese economy and the government's anti-corruption austerity campaign. At the close of 2014, the business jets market in China grew by 15.5% year-on-year and deliveries are currently lagging almost two years behind orders.
