Abstracts

According to Statistics MRC, the Global Alcoholic beverages market is accounted for $1324.1 billion in 2017 and is expected to reach $1864.2 billion by 2026 growing at a CAGR of 3.9% during the forecast period. High growth in emerging economies, high disposable income, rising spending to explore new entertainment options and the demand for alcoholic drinks are some of the factors propelling the market growth. However, factors such as growing demand for non-alcoholic beverages like energy drink and high cost of premium/super premium products are hindering the market growth.

Alcoholic beverage is a drink having ethanol, generally recognized as alcohol. Alcoholic beverages are devoured across the world. The advantages of devouring alcohol in restricted amount are a decrease in threat of cardiovascular disease, avoidance of cold, whereas having red wine reduces the risk of heart diseases and burns fat. They are fermented from the sugars in grains, berries, fruits, and such other components as tubers, plant saps, milk, and honey. The demand for these alcoholic beverages has altered in the past few years, taking into account the on/off premises consumption trends.

Amongst product, Beer segment held significant market share due to increasing demand for craft beer. Beer is the most consumed alcoholic drink across the globe and contains around of alcohol. By geography, Asia Pacific held largest market share being the global manufacturing hub of the world. India and China are anticipated to observe high demand for alcoholic beverages over the forecast period owing to considerable growth in the disposable income, increasing population, and inclination of young generation towards the western culture. Availability of local spirits such as baijiu in China is propelling the growth of alcoholic beverages in Asia Pacific region.
