Abstracts

According to Statistics MRC, the Global Feed Additives Market is accounted for $36.15 billion in 2020 and is expected to reach $63.99 billion by 2028 growing at a CAGR of 7.4% during the forecast period. Growth in feed production and rise in awareness about feed quality are the major factors propelling the market growth. However, volatile raw material prices for natural feed additives are hampering market growth.

Feed additives are nutritional supplements that are added to get better the quality of animal-derived products such as meat, eggs, etc. Feed additives typically consist of vitamins, minerals, amino acids, and other essential nutrients that ensure optimum health of animals and prevent diseases.

Based on the form, the dry segment is estimated to have a lucrative growth during the forecast period owing to it is easy to mix with feed and are simple to store and handle. Its accessibility in pellet and mash forms further allows customers to have options in terms of mixing techniques, which should support the growth of this segment.

By geography, the Asia Pacific is going to have a huge demand due to the occurrence of a huge livestock population and their growth rate. Moreover, the region has observed a rise in the number of feed mills and feed production, mainly in countries such as India and Japan.

Some of the key players profiled in the Feed Additives Market include Lallemand Inc., Alltech Inc., Novozymes AS, Elanco Animal Health, Sumitomo Corporation, Evonik Industries, Novus International NV, BASF SE, Danisco Animal Nutrition, Archer Daniels Midland Co.
