Abstracts

According to Statistics MRC, the Global Hardware Wallet Market is accounted for $213.78 million in 2020 and is expected to reach $1,465.10 million by 2028 growing at a CAGR of 27.2% during the forecast period. Increasing investments in cryptocurrency and a growing focus on security are the major factors propelling the market growth. However, limited consumer awareness is hampering market growth.

A hardware wallet is a specialized cryptocurrency wallet intended to store user private keys in a secure encrypted hardware device. Consequently, the hardware wallets are meant to enable users to store private keys at a protected area of the microcontroller while protecting confidential information.

Based on the connection type, the near field communication (NFC) segment holds the largest share in the market. NFC technology enables the flexible usage of cryptocurrency by providing means of storage. By utilizing NFC, payment is allowed even if either the payee or payer is not connected to the internet, depending on the type of payment request.

By geography, the Asia Pacific is going to have lucrative growth due to the increasing implementation of cryptocurrency. The region is also innovating NFC hardware wallets, which are also emerging in the global market.
