Abstracts

According to Statistics MRC, the Global Pharmaceutical Packaging Market is accounted for $88.62 billion in 2020 and is expected to reach $164.02 billion by 2028 growing at a CAGR of 8.0% during the forecast period. The growing demand for drug delivery devices and blister packaging and rising health awareness and adoption of new regulatory standards are the major factors propelling the market growth. However, the price volatility of raw materials is hampering market growth.

Packaging is an integral part of a pharmaceutical product. Packaging is often involved in dispensing, dosing, and use of pharmaceutical products. Communication of proper use and cautionary labels are also regulated. There are several different types of packaging for a pharmaceutical product, which are classified as primary, secondary, and tertiary.

Based on the type, the plastic bottles segment is estimated to have a huge demand during the forecast period. The growing use of oral drug delivery mode owing to patient compliance and convenience, increasing cases of communicable diseases and the rise in the aging population in developed economies are responsible for the high share of the bottles segment.

By geography, the Asia Pacific is going to have lucrative growth during the forecast period. Increasing government initiatives in the emerging pharmaceutical market, an increase in contract manufacturing activities, a rise in the aging population and increased spending on healthcare are pouring into the market in this region.

Some of the key players profiled in the Pharmaceutical Packaging Market include Amcor Plc, Ardagh Group S.A., Becton, Dickinson and Company, Berry Global, Inc., Bircare Limited, Catalent, Inc., Clondalkin Group Holdings B.V., Constantia Flexibles
