Abstracts

This is the ONGOING report. If ordered it could be delivered in 2-3 weeks timeframe.

This report, from Stratview Research, studies the global composite preforms market over the period 2010 to 2021. The report provides detailed insights on the market dynamics to enable informed business decision making and growth strategy formulation based on the opportunities present in the market.

The Opportunity for Global Composite Preforms Market: Highlights

Composite preforms have been used for almost 80 years in the infusion molding process. Composite preform is a preshaped fiber form. The fibers are arranged in one, two or three dimensions in the approximate shape, contour and thickness desired in the finished composite part. Currently most of the composite preforms are used in the turbofan engine applications for commercial aircraft, such as fan blade. The composite preform technology in aerospace and defense industry has gained acceptance over the years.

The two or three dimensional composite preforms are also capable of being used in the manufacturing of high performance composite parts for automotive industry, but most of the auto makers have disowned it due to perceived high cost and auto makers' change averse culture. During the last ten years, governments of many countries have imposed stringent regulations on the automotive industry by setting up targets related to vehicle's fuel efficiency and carbon emission, which compelled auto OEMs to look for the best alternatives for achieving those targets. Composite preform is one of the best options for achieving those targets. Currently, many OEMs are heavily betting on composite preforms based highly automated High Pressure Resin Transfer Molding (HP-RTM) for their structural applications in their mass produced vehicles.

The global composite preforms market offers a healthy growth opportunity and is likely to grow at an 8.5% CGAR during the forecast period of 2016 to 2021. Ability to develop complex parts, excellent product strength, and shortened cycle time are the major drivers providing growth momentum to the global composite preforms market.

Aerospace and defense is expected to remain dominant in the composite preforms market whereas automotive is expected to experience the fastest growth in the next five years.

North America is expected to remain the dominant region in the composite preforms market being the manufacturing hub of the major turbofan engine OEMs.

The supply chain of this market comprises raw material manufacturers, composite preform manufacturers, part fabricators, and OEMs in automotive, aerospace & defense, etc. The key aerospace engine manufacturers are CFM, GE Aviation Engines, and Pratt & Whitney and key automotive OEMs are BMW, GM, Toyota, and Ford.

The key composite preform manufactures are A&P technology, Albany Engineered Composites, Bally Ribbon Mills, Sigmatex, SGL Kumpers GmbH. New product development, regional expansion, and joint product development with OEMs are the key strategies adopted by the key players to gain competitive edge in the market.
