India Jointing Compound Market stood at INR122.61 crore in 2021 and is projected to grow at a CAGR of 5.76% by 2027, to reach INR 170.15 crore by 2027. A jointing compound is a white powder material applied to seal joints that exist between drywall sheets. It is also often used as an alternative to traditional plastering to finish joints, corner beads, trims, and fasteners. Jointing compounds are also known as drywall compound, joint cement and mud and are mainly used in construction of buildings. Technological developments across industries such as metal fabrication plants and improved architectural designs are expected to create opportunities of growth for jointing compounds market across the country. Growth in the real-estate sector is also providing growth opportunities to the India Jointing Compound Market. The growth and investment in the real estate sector is increasing owing to the growth in corporate environment and the surging demand for office space as well as urban and semi-urban accommodations. Sectors such as IT, retail, consulting and e-commerce have registered high demand for office spaces in recent times.

Based on product type, the market is segmented into single and multi jointing compounds. In 2021, single jointing compound was the dominating segment by product type in India Jointing Compound Market with a share of 66.57%, owing to aging building structures that soar up the application of jointing compounds in cracks ceilings or walls. Usually, ceiling cracks are caused by structural damage or settling due to earthquakes, floods, or other natural calamities. Single jointing compounds are effective in repairing all these types of cracks in buildings.

Drywall is the future of construction in India. It's here to stay as sand and water become more expensive both in terms of cost and availability. Drywall is lighter and can save much weight, resulting in thinner columns and slabs. It takes less time to build and uses a small amount of water. As a result, the construction can proceed at a considerably faster and more well-planned pace. Thus, the growing application of jointing compounds in drywall is expected to propel the demand for the India Jointing Compound market.
