Abstracts

Dietary supplements are products containing dietary components that are consumed in form of either powder, liquid or tablets/capsules, to address deficiency caused due to lack of balanced dietary intake. Owing to increasing health consciousness, changing lifestyle and willingness of consumers to switch towards healthier dietary options, market for dietary supplements in North America is expected to grow during the forecast period. Moreover, increasing demand for dietary supplements is being witnessed on account for growing obese population in the region. Amway, Herbalife, Living Essentials LLC, and Pfizer are few of the leading players engaged in offering dietary supplements in North America.

According to “North America Dietary Supplements Market By Product Type, By End User, By Point of Sale, Competition Forecast & Opportunities, 2012-2022”, dietary supplements market in North America is projected to surpass US$ 38 billion by 2022. Dietary supplements can be broadly categorized into specific product types that include vitamins & mineral supplements, herbal supplements, protein supplements and others. Among all of these product segments, vitamins & minerals segment grabbed the largest market share in 2016, and the segment is expected to continue its market dominance during the forecast period. In 2016, adult and old-age consumers accounted for more than three-fourths of the market share in value terms, and the trend is expected to prevail through 2022. “North America Dietary Supplements Market By Product Type, By End User, By Point of Sale, Competition Forecast & Opportunities, 2012-2022” discusses the following aspects of dietary supplements market in the region:
