Abstracts

Saudi Arabia veterinary medicine market is bound to experience impressive growth with anticipated CAGR in the forecast period, 2023-2027, on the account of advancing pharmaceutical products and their availability for the animal welfare in the country. Rapidly growing demand for the animal healthcare products & services along with rising concerns toward their health is further driving the growth of the Saudi Arabia veterinary medicine market in the upcoming five years. Pharmaceutical products, therapeutics, and animal healthcare related drugs and supplements are altogether categorized as veterinary medicine.

Animal Welfare Concerns Drive Market Growth

Rapidly growing population of companion animals like cats, dogs, camels, etc. is majorly responsible for the growth of the Saudi Arabia veterinary medicine market in the upcoming five years. With increasing companion animal population, the pet owners are quite concerned regarding long and short term health conditions of their pets. Thus, the surge in the demand for better healthcare facility, advanced pharmaceutical products, therapeutic medicines and drugs are anticipated to further support the growth of the Saudi Arabia veterinary medicine market in the next five years.

Increasing demand for animal based food products like milk & dairy products, poultry products, etc. is also substantiating the growth of the Saudi Arabia veterinary medicine market in the future five years. Rising concerns toward food products and its safety, and after consideration of various diseases being caused due to consumption of animal products, maintenance of health and well being of the animals is a serious issue, and generates higher demand for the veterinary medicines, and thus aiding market growth.

Technological Advancement Leads Market Growth

Rapidly growing healthcare system in the country is also focused on animal healthcare as much as it is concerned toward human healthcare systems. Growing advancements in the pharmaceutical sector, advancements in the drugs that are best suited for the pet animals as well as production animals being harvested, is driving the market growth in the upcoming five years. Rapidly increasing instances of zoonotic diseases like cat scratch disease is increasing in the country and supporting the growth of the Saudi Arabia veterinary medicine market in the next five years.

Increasing research and product development in the sector like rapidly growing demands for vaccines against various diseases for the companion animals, pharmaceutical products that are provided for treatment purposes to the animals, and feed additives, that are anticipated to build their immunity, enhance their growth, aid their fur textures, etc. are also responsible for the surging demands for the veterinary medicine advancement, and thus supports market growth in the forecast years.
