Abstracts

UAE Veterinary testing services market is anticipated to register growth with an impressive CAGR in the forecast period, 2023-2027, on the account of increasing instances of chronic diseases among livestock. Increasing demand for standardized animal welfare tests is further driving the growth of the UAE veterinary testing services market in the upcoming five years. With rising concerns for their companion animals, the common population is actively investing in animal healthcare services that are in turn responsible for the growth of the UAE veterinary testing services market in the next five years.

Veterinary testing services include various diagnostic and pathologic tests that determine the health conditions and infectious situations of the animals. These testing services are lab tests, physical tests, blood work, and microbiology tests on animals. Utilization of advanced technology, advanced techniques, methods, and advanced medical devices ensures the efficiency of the tests and thus helps in maintaining animal healthcare.
