Technological Developments in Dentistry Fuel Middle East & Africa Dental Bone Graft Substitute and Barrier Membrane Market

Technological developments are making it easier for dentists to do their job quickly, safely, and comfortably. Technologically advanced instruments make dental hygiene appointments much more pleasant for patients than they used to be. As a result, patients become compliant and willingly schedule treatment and recall visits. Restorative dentistry benefits overall oral health (especially effective teeth and oral care) and improve facial appearance. Using new dental implantation techniques, and advanced navigation and monitoring technologies, dentists can insert implants through minimally invasive surgeries. Augmented reality (AR) technology is more prevalent in reconstructive and aesthetic procedures in dental practices, as artificial intelligence (AI) can show patients how they would look after the treatment. Further, the increasing adoption of synthetic bone substitutes is likely to favor the growth of the dental graft substitute and barrier membrane market. In 2020, Orthopediatrics Corp., a company focused solely on pediatric orthopedics, launched QuickPack, an all-synthetic replacement containing a high-viscosity calcium phosphate cement that mimics the mineral phase of natural bone. In July 2020, Spine Wave Inc. announced the launch of the Temptest allograft bone matrix that comprises cancellous and partially demineralized cortical bone. Thus, such technologically advanced dental membranes and bone grafts are expected to provide growth opportunities for the market players in the coming years.
