Rising Demand for Aromas in Plant-Based Food and Beverages Fuels South & Central America Aroma Ingredients for Food and Beverages Market

In recent years, the demand for plant-based food and beverages has surged owing to rising consumer awareness about health and wellness, as well as due to environmental and ethical reasons. The raw ingredients of plant-based products such as pea, almond, or soy protein contribute to the characteristics of aroma volatiles, which may not be desirable. For instance, pea protein has been known to impart beany flavor that must be reduced in the final products. Aroma ingredients play a critical role in enhancing the sensory appeal of plant-based food and beverages by imparting familiar and desirable scents, thus making them more palatable.

Aroma ingredients offer a versatile and customized solution for manufacturers seeking to develop a wide range of plant-based products that cater to diverse consumer preferences and dietary needs. By harnessing aroma ingredients derived from natural sources such as fruits, vegetables, herbs, and spices, manufacturers can create authentic and appealing flavors and scents that resonate with health-conscious consumers, thereby contributing to the market growth. Further, the rising sophistication of plant-based culinary offerings, including meat alternatives, dairy alternatives, and plant-based snacks and beverages, presents ample opportunities for aroma ingredients manufacturers to innovate and collaborate with food and beverage companies. Thus, the rising demand for aromas in plant-based food and beverages is expected to fuel the aroma ingredients for food and beverages market growth during the forecast period.

South & Central America Aroma Ingredients for Food and Beverages Market Overview

In South & Central America, the demand for aroma ingredients for food and beverages is attributed to rising demand for convenience and on-the-go food and beverages. Since 2020, 50% of Colombian consumers have been opting for ready-to-eat and ready-to-cook food. Aroma ingredients are used in RTC and RTE products to enhance the sensory appeal and texture of the products. In addition, the rising awareness regarding health and benefits has resulted in the demand for products with natural ingredients. This, in turn, has resulted in demand for premium food and beverages with healthier alternatives. In July 2020, 41% of Chilean consumers opted for premium food and beverages. Aroma ingredients are used to create unique and appealing taste profiles in these products, thereby contributing to market growth. Further, growing industrialization, supporting food production business, and changing food habits of consumers are bolstering the demand for aroma ingredients. All these factors are propelling the sales of aroma ingredients for food and beverages market in South & Central America.
