Abstracts

Visiongain's analysis suggest that the global personal care packaging market will be driven by growth in the developing markets and the clear emergence of a middle class with higher disposable incomes, in addition to a number of current consumer trends. The emerging markets will be characterised by strong economic growth and this will facilitate demand for higher quality and higher quantity packaging with regard to consumer purchases. The low labour costs will also incentivise multinationals to expand the scale of their operations in these markets. Visiongain has determined that the value of the global personal care packaging market in 2013 will reach $42.91bn.
