Abstracts

The medical device industry has witnessed explosive growth in recent years. According to visiongain estimates, the global market was worth $266.0bn in 2011. Much of this growth is linked to the rising prevalence of a number of diseases worldwide; most notably in cardiac and neurological systems. After the negative effects the recession had on healthcare budgets in 2009, the medical device industry began to recover owing to patient demographics, physician adoption and patient demand. The medical device industry is one of the largest and fastest growing areas of the medical and pharmaceutical industries.

The therapeutic respiratory devices market is one of the fastest growing markets of the medical devices industry. It is an attractive and highly profitable market and therefore an intensely competitive one. This is clearly demonstrated by the considerable number of mergers and acquisitions within this sector in recent years as well as the myriad of devices that are expected to be launched in the coming years.

The therapeutic respiratory devices market will see significant growth in the period 2012-2022. Key factors in the growth of the market are a global aging population and the continued rise in chronic diseases and conditions such as obesity and diabetes, which continue to be considered significant risk factors in the development of several respiratory diseases. Research regarding the causes of many respiratory disorders as well as their associations with other chronic conditions continues to accelerate. This will therefore spur the introduction of new innovative technologies to treat a wide range of respiratory disorders. Emerging markets provide a significant commercial opportunity for companies operating in this industry as they are expected to continue growing with a double-digit CAGR over the next decade.

Sleep therapy devices remained the largest segment in 2011, accounting for 54.6% of the global therapeutic respiratory devices. Growth in this market is being driven by an increase in patient and physician adoption as well the significant increase in awareness of Sleep-Disordered Breathing, particularly Obstructive Sleep Apnea (OSA). There will, therefore, continue to be a strong demand for continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP) devices, particularly those with enhanced patient comfort and portability features. Further market growth will be driven by a favourable reimbursement outlook in the US, the largest market for therapeutic respiratory devices.
