Abstracts

The global Bovine Respiratory Disease Treatment market size is poised to register 11.31% growth (CAGR) from 2024 to 2030, presenting significant growth prospects for companies operating in the industry. The industry study analyzes the global Bovine Respiratory Disease Treatment market By Treatment (Vaccines, Antibiotics, NSAIDs, Immunomodulators, Others), By Disease (Lower Respiratory Tract Infections, Upper Respiratory Tract Infections, Diphtheria).

In the field of bovine respiratory disease (BRD) treatment, key trends focus on the development of novel antimicrobial agents, vaccines, and management strategies to improve prevention, diagnosis, and control of BRD in cattle populations. Advances in antimicrobial stewardship and resistance management drive the development of alternative treatment options, such as phage therapy, immune modulators, and host-directed therapies, to reduce reliance on antibiotics and mitigate the risk of antimicrobial resistance. Additionally, the innovation of next-generation vaccines incorporating novel antigens and adjuvants enhances immunogenicity and efficacy in protecting cattle against BRD pathogens. Moreover, the implementation of comprehensive herd health management programs, including biosecurity measures, vaccination protocols, and nutritional optimization, improves overall resilience and disease resistance in cattle herds. Furthermore, the integration of diagnostic technologies such as point-of-care testing and molecular surveillance enables rapid detection and characterization of BRD pathogens, facilitating targeted treatment and containment strategies to reduce disease burden and economic losses in the livestock industry..
