The future of Burkitt lymphoma therapeutics is characterized by advancements in targeted therapies, immunotherapy, and combination treatment regimens to improve outcomes and reduce treatment-related toxicity in patients with this aggressive form of non-Hodgkin lymphoma. Key trends include the development of targeted agents such as B-cell receptor signaling inhibitors, proteasome inhibitors, and anti-CD20 monoclonal antibodies for precision targeting of lymphoma cells and disruption of tumor microenvironment interactions. Additionally, the integration of immunotherapy approaches, including immune checkpoint inhibitors, chimeric antigen receptor (CAR) T-cell therapy, and tumor-infiltrating lymphocyte (TIL) therapy, harnesses the patient's immune system to recognize and eliminate lymphoma cells, offering promising options for refractory or relapsed disease. Moreover, the exploration of combination treatment regimens incorporating chemotherapy, targeted agents, and immunotherapies optimizes treatment efficacy and reduces the risk of disease recurrence, leading to improved progression-free survival and overall survival rates.
