Abstracts

The global Minimally Invasive Surgery market size is poised to register 13.2% growth from 2024 to 2032, presenting significant growth prospects for companies operating in the industry. The industry study analyzes the global Minimally Invasive Surgery market across By Type (Laparoscopic Surgery, Robotic Surgery), By Condition (Gastrointestinal Conditions, Spinal Conditions, Gynecologic Conditions, Others), By End-User (Hospitals, Clinics, Ambulatory Surgical Centers, Others)

The future of the minimally invasive surgery market is driven by technological advancements, increasing prevalence of chronic diseases, and growing demand for less invasive treatment options. Minimally invasive surgery (MIS) techniques, including laparoscopy, robotic-assisted surgery, and endoscopy, offer several advantages over traditional open surgeries, including smaller incisions, reduced postoperative pain, faster recovery times, and shorter hospital stays. With the rising aging population and the burden of chronic conditions such as cardiovascular diseases, obesity, and gastrointestinal disorders, there is a growing demand for MIS procedures that offer effective disease management with minimal morbidity and faster return to normal activities. Further, advancements in surgical instrumentation, imaging technologies, and robotic-assisted platforms are expanding the scope of MIS across various surgical specialties, including gynecology, urology, and orthopedics. Over the forecast period to 2030, increasing investments in healthcare infrastructure, rising adoption of MIS techniques in emerging markets, and growing patient awareness about the benefits of minimally invasive procedures are expected to drive market growth and innovation.
