Abstracts

The global Peripheral Vascular Stents market size is poised to register 7.28% growth from 2024 to 2030, presenting significant growth prospects for companies operating in the industry. The industry study analyzes the global Peripheral Vascular Stents market across By Type (Drug Eluting Stents (DES), Bare Metal Stents (BMS), Bioabsorbable Stents), By Mode of Delivery (Self-expanding Stents, Balloon-expandable Stents), By Product (Iliac Artery Stents, Femoral Artery Stents, Carotid Artery Stents, Renal Artery Stents, Others), By End-user (Hospital & Cardiac Centers & Ambulatory Surgical Centers, Ambulatory Surgical Centers, Others).

The Peripheral Vascular Stents market is experiencing robust growth driven by the increasing prevalence of peripheral artery disease (PAD), advancements in stent design and materials, and growing adoption of endovascular interventions for the treatment of arterial stenosis, occlusions, and aneurysms affecting the peripheral vasculature. Peripheral vascular stents are specialized medical devices used to support and maintain patency in narrowed or obstructed peripheral arteries and veins, restoring blood flow, relieving symptoms, and preventing limb ischemia and tissue loss in patients with peripheral vascular disease (PVD). Key factors driving market expansion include the rising burden of PAD, diabetic foot ulcers, and critical limb ischemia (CLI), driven by aging population, diabetes, obesity, smoking, and sedentary lifestyle habits, and the increasing demand for minimally invasive treatment options offering faster recovery, shorter hospital stays, and improved patient outcomes compared to traditional open surgical procedures. Additionally, advancements in peripheral vascular stent technologies, including drug-eluting stents (DES), bioresorbable stents, self-expanding stents, and covered stents, are expanding the treatment options and clinical indications for peripheral vascular interventions, enabling precision-guided therapy, vessel preservation, and long-term patency rates in complex lesion subsets. Moreover, the expanding role of peripheral vascular stents in the management of chronic total occlusions (CTOs), femoropopliteal lesions, iliac artery stenosis, and peripheral aneurysms is driving investment and innovation in stent design, delivery systems, and adjunctive therapies to optimize procedural outcomes and reduce restenosis rates. Furthermore, the growing emphasis on multidisciplinary vascular care, limb salvage programs, and value-based healthcare models is expected to drive market growth and adoption of peripheral vascular stents as part of comprehensive vascular disease management strategies in the foreseeable future. With the continuous focus on clinical evidence generation, physician training, and patient access to innovative therapies, the Peripheral Vascular Stents market is poised for further expansion in the coming years.
