Abstracts

The global Pulmonary Embolism Therapeutics market size is poised to register 9.06% growth (CAGR) from 2024 to 2030, presenting significant growth prospects for companies operating in the industry. The industry study analyzes the global Pulmonary Embolism Therapeutics market By Application (Hospitals, Ambulatory surgical centers, Research institutes), By Route of Administration (Oral, Parenteral).

Pulmonary embolism (PE) is a life-threatening condition characterized by the obstruction of pulmonary arteries by blood clots, leading to impaired blood flow to the lungs and potentially fatal consequences. Key trends in pulmonary embolism therapeutics involve prompt diagnosis and risk stratification to guide appropriate treatment strategies. Anticoagulation remains the mainstay of treatment, with direct oral anticoagulants (DOACs) increasingly favored over traditional heparin-based therapies due to their ease of administration and comparable efficacy and safety profiles. Thrombolytic therapy may be considered in high-risk patients with massive PE or hemodynamic instability, aiming to rapidly dissolve thrombi and restore pulmonary perfusion. Novel therapeutic approaches, including catheter-based interventions such as catheter-directed thrombolysis and mechanical thrombectomy, offer targeted removal of thrombi and improved outcomes in selected cases. Additionally, advancements in risk assessment models and biomarkers aid in identifying patients at increased risk of recurrent venous thromboembolism, guiding long-term anticoagulation strategies and optimizing patient care..
