Abstracts

Vancomycin Resistant Enterococcal (VRE) Infection Drug Development Pipeline Study, H2 2018 is the latest infectious disease publication with comprehensive information of Vancomycin Resistant Enterococcal (VRE) Infection pipeline products.

DISEASE OVERVIEW

Vancomycin-resistant enterococcal infection (VRE) is a key nosocomial pathogen occurring mostly in GI tract and occasionally observed in GU tract, skin or oral cavity. High mortality rates are associated with VRE.

Enterococci is common bacteria observed in intestines of human and in case of any infections, it is often treated with Vancomycin. However, VRE is an emerging antibiotic resistant bacteria, that belongs to the species Enterococcus faecalis and Enterococcus faecium, which is resistant to this drug and accordingly, named as VRE.

North American countries report high prevalence of the disease. It occurs mainly during long hospital stays, ICU, long-term care facility, person-to-person contamination etc. Further, it is also associated with certain comorbid conditions.

Amidst high prevalence of the disease in North America and increasing scope in European countries, 16 companies are currently focusing on developing pipeline products for Vancomycin-resistant enterococcal infections

The current VRE pipeline products comprise of antibiotics against the bacteria along with other drugs such as AM 218, AZX1103, BDM-I, contezolid, HB1345, LCB01-0371, Marinus, MGB-BP3, NAI-107, NAI-603, OG716, RBX2660, SLP-0901, SLP-0905,

Teixobactin, WCK 5222.
