Abstracts

Bio-pesticides are a certain type of pesticides derived from such natural materials as animals, plants, bacteria, and certain minerals. Bio-pesticides are usually inherently less toxic than conventional chemical pesticides, and have the advantages of no pollution, no residue, and high efficiency. With people's raising awareness of pesticide residues in food, environment protection and sustainable development, the application of bio-pesticides have a great breakthrough in the past years. Bio-pesticides will have a good prospect in the future.

The global consumption of bio-pesticides kept a sharply increase in the past few years, with a CAGR of 18%-20% in 2007-2014. China is one of important bio-pesticides supply and consumption country. There are more than 200 bio-pesticides producers and over 20 kinds of commercialized bio-pesticides in China at present. The market value of bio-pesticides in China accounted for about 10%-15% of the globally.

In order to promote bio-pesticides, China government has done a lot of support works these years, such as provide subsidies to the farmers or planting bases for they using bio-pesticides, government procurement and set up the demonstration sites of bio-pesticides control, etc.

In 28th May, 2015, Sichuan Hebang Corporation Limited announced that it is planning to acquire Stockton (Israel) Ltd.. In oversea market, CBC has acquired Intrachem Bio Italia in 2012, Bayer has acquired AgraQuest and Prophyta in 2012 and 2013 respectively, BASF has acquired Becker Underwood in 2012 and Syngenta has acquired Pasteuria in 2012. In addition, BASF pointed out a combination product of chemical pesticides and bio-pesticides as the most effective solution in crop protection. From all indication, bio-pesticides have been paid more and more attention.
