EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The global breakfast cereals market was equal to 49.41 billion USD (calculated in retail prices) in 2014. Until 2024, the breakfast cereals market in the world is forecast to reach 71.44 billion USD (in retail prices), thus increasing at a CAGR of 3.37% per annum for the period 2019-2024. This is a decrease, compared to the growth of about 4.01% per year, registered in 2014-2018.

The average consumption per capita in value terms reached 8.56 USD per capita (in retail prices) in 2014. In the next five years, it grew at a CAGR of 2.97% per annum.

In the medium term (by 2024), the indicator is forecast to slow down its growth and increase at a CAGR of 2.26% per annum.

One of the most important breakfast cereals purchase considerations includes the sugar content. In recent years, consumers, especially millennials and generation Z, have become more conscious regarding the levels of sugar in cereal products. This means that a larger number of them is increasingly looking for breakfast cereal options with no added sugar or with lower sugar content. In response, breakfast cereals manufacturers are launching more variants with honey, dried fruit or coconut sugar.

Furthermore, people are also searching for more convenient breakfast options. Due to the increasingly hectic character of modern lifestyle, most consumers already eat their breakfast in transit. This puts pressure on market players, which need to provide more convenient solutions in packaging that is more portable. Furthermore, most of the leading companies are making efforts to position cereals as suitable for snacking. At the same time, most people are holding the belief that breakfast is the most important meal of the day. So, buyers are usually choosing breakfast cereals that are not only filling, but also more energizing. As a result, the market has seen more product options with added protein and fibers, offering additional health benefits.

Nowadays, younger generations are more prone to explore unique and uncommon flavor combinations. In order to meet the ever-changing customer expectations, breakfast cereal manufacturers are focusing on offering various ranges of products with new and intriguing flavors. Some of the examples include healthy breakfast variants made of legumes such as peas and chickpeas, infused with different types of spice mixes.
