Although potato crisps remain one of the most popular indulgence categories among people, it has been hugely impacted by the ongoing health awareness trend worldwide. With the increasing number of innovative and healthier launches in the entire savory snack category, it has become difficult for potato-based products to compete. In fact, most people have been turning away from potato crisps towards more healthy alternatives such as rice- and lentil-based snacks, popcorn and others. In order to remain relevant, market players have been exploring opportunities in flavor, functionality, and healthy innovations. In fact, during the past few years, there have been more oven-baked crisp in the shelves of the supermarkets.

Following the increasing interest in healthier lifestyle, the attention towards better-for-you chips has been also increasing in the last few years. As a matter of fact, the market has witnessed more companies to use oils which are perceived to be healthier, including olive oil, coconut oil, as well as canola oil and soybean oil, which are high-stability oils. When it comes to flavor, younger generations now have more experience with different cultures, which makes them more familiar with the diversity of international flavors and spices. For this reason, they are also more eager to try potato crisps options with bold and spicy flavor profile. This includes potato crisps with flavors like: pickle, whisky and haggis, seaweed, spicy cheese, masala, sriracha, wasabi and ginger.
