EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The non-carbonated soft drinks market in South and Central America was equal to 12.99 billion USD (calculated in retail prices) in 2014. Until 2024, the drinks market in South and Central America is forecast to reach 34.53 billion USD (in retail prices), thus increasing at a CAGR of 8.89% per annum for the period 2019-2024. This is a decrease, compared to the growth of about 12.09% per year, registered in 2014-2018.

The average consumption per capita in value terms reached 34.76 USD per capita (in retail prices) in 2014. In the next five years, it grew at a CAGR of 8.73% per annum. In the medium term (by 2024), the indicator is forecast to slow down its growth and increase at a CAGR of 7.99% per annum.

One of the most important trends on the non-carbonated soft drinks market is linked with the surging demand for healthy and sustainable products. Consumers' preferences have shifted to more natural products with "clean label", including fermented drinks, teas, lower sugar beverages and fortified drinks with health benefit claims. In fact, people are increasingly embracing the non-carbonated drinks, but the consumption of drinks with high-sugar content is rather occasionally than regularly, as they are perceived more as an indulgence. In addition, the number of people who are paying attention to labelling is increasing. Thus, companies also need to focus on transparency and simplicity regarding information, in order to gain customers' trust.

Overall, the major players have been under pressure to respond to changing consumer preferences. So, they try to reduce their use of sugar and to include fortified soft drinks, as well as zero-calorie drinks in their portfolio. In order to differentiate themselves, companies now are accounting both on developing new and intriguing flavors and on the functional qualities of their products. As a matter of fact, they introduce products with fruity flavors, which can be associated with the healthy benefits of the respective fruit.
